ALORAMA SEMINARY, Staunton, Va.-Mrs.

Sheffer respectfully informs her friends and the public, that the Ninth Session of her School will commence on Monday, November 2d, and close on the last day of March. Terms the same as heretofore.

This Institution is supplied, in all its departments, with teachers of great experience, well tested ability, and approved fidelity. It is also furnished with apparatus sufficient to illustrate all the branches of Natural Science; with four Pianos, for the use of the Music scholars; and a Library of more than four hundred and fifty squares.

with four Pianos, for the use of the Music scholars; and a Library of more than four hundred and fifty volumes of well-selected books, free for all the pupils. It is believed that no school in our country affords greater facilities for acquiring a thorough and practical acquaintance with every branch of Feinale Education.

The whole establishment is under the immediate care and direction of Mrs. Sheffey herself. She has heretofore explained fully to the public, the principle on which the deportment of the young ladies is regulated, viz: to combine, as far as possible, external accomplishments with intellectual improvement and the cultivation of moral virtue. The success, which, for eight sessions, has crowned her efforts, has fully convinced her, that this principle is founded in truth, and is better calculated than any other, to prepare young ladies for the important duties that will devolve on them, and the interesting scenes that await them in life. them in life. THE PUBLIC.—The subscriber having re turned to the city, he will therefore continue the Comb making and repairing business at his same old stand, a few doors below the old Market-house, where he stand, a few doors below the old Market-house, where he will repair and alter old shell combs superior to any done in the State or elsewhere. Having served a regular apprenticeship at the above business, he justifies himself in presenting his claim to this community for patronage. My brother, George Pettus, who advertised in the Compiler a few days since, has declined carrying on the above business, though all those having combs either to cut, alter or repair, can, by leaving them at my shop, have them made so as to look equal to new, and will warrant them to be as durable where mended as any part of the comb, and he will polish them in a handsome style. RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.—By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Superior Court of Law and Chancery for Henrico county, made the 26th of June, 1835, in a suit in Chancery between Whitmel H. Pugh's administrator and others, plaintiffs, and James Winston and others, defendants, the undersigned Commissioners will on Friday, the 16th day of October, 1835, at the premises, sell at public auction to the highest bidder, the middle tenement in the block of buildings on the south side of E street, in the city of Richmond, near the Market bridge, called the Mansion House, with the use of a passage 3 feet 3 inches wide, and the staircase therein between the said tenement and the one next above in common with the owner or occupant of the upper tenement; subject, however, to such ground rent as may be properly chargeable on the said middle tenement. Also the houses and tenement, which on the 25th of December, 1817, were occupied by Cochran & Williams as a dry goods store, and by Mrs. Judith Nelson as a Boarding house; being on the south side of E or Main street in the City of Richmond, and the fourth house from the corner of 15th st. west, together with the ground and lumber-house attached thereto. Also, two lots or parcels of land in the said City, numbered one and two, in a survey and plat, made by Richard Young, containing 24 feet front on D street, running back 100 feet; and being the same property conveyed to James Winston by McCraw, Hay and Campbell, by deed, May 23d, 1817, of record in the Husting's Court of Richmond. Terms of sale—one-third cash, one-third in six months, and one-third in twelve months from the day of sale. Bonds with security, or negotiable notes with endorsers will be required of the purchasers, and no conveyance will be executed to them until directed by the Court. The sale will commence at 12 o'clock with the Mansion House tenement.

THE JOHNSON DINNER

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1835.

Annicersory of the Battle of the Thames.

A large number of the democracy of the City of New York celebrated the Anniversary of the Battle of the Thames, on Monday last, the 5th instant, by a Public Dinner, given in honor of Col. RICHARD M. JOHNSON, Dinner, given in honor of Col. Richard M. Johnson, to whose patriotism, gallantry, coolness, and bravery, the victory in that important engagement is in a large degree to be attributed. The Dinner was given at Tammany Hall, the time-honored rallying place of the democracy of this metropolis. At six o'clock, between three and four hundred citizens, including a large number of distinguished guests, among whom were Lieut. Governor Tracy, Governor Mason, of Michigan, Col. B. Z. Canonge, of Louisiana, Col. Smith, and Meesrs. Fisk and Wright, delegates from the democracy of Boston, sat down to a most abundant and tasteful banquet. The Hon. Cornelius W. Lawrence, Mayor of the City, presided, assisted by Garret Gilbert, David Bryson, Doctor Philip E. Milledoler, William S. Coc, James Conner, and Gerardus Boyce, Esquires. After the cloth was removed, the following toasts were proposed, and severally drunk with enthusiastic applause.

5. The Vice President of the United States: His distinguished public life, devoted to a consistent and effective support of the fundamental principles of our free government, is New York's pledge for her "favorite son," that he will not impair the virtues of the mantle which his countrymen have determined shall in due time fall upon him. Air—"Jackson's Delight."

Before announcing the next toast, the Mayor rose, and addressed the assemblage in the following words:

The toast which I am now about to offer you, gentlemen, is one that I feel assured will receive your cordial approbation. So little diversity of opinion, indeed, can exist as to the justness and propriety of the sentiments it expresses, that it will scarcely be expected I shall detain you with any preparatory culogy of the individual to whom it refers that you with any preparatory eulogy of the individual to whom it refers.

We have met, fellow-citizens, upon the anniversary of one of those great occasions, which, while it has given a brilliant lustre to individual reputation, has also contributed to national renown, and to the preservation of our liberties as a people. We have but to turn back the pages of our national history, to that period when the gloom of defeat and disaster darkened for a time the character of our arms, and to realize the horrors of that system of our arms, and to realize the horrors of that system of warfare, which directed the weapon of the relentless sa-vage against the breast of his disarmed victim, to know and appreciate the perils which surrounded those of our country's defenders who engaged in the contest of the last war on the Western frontiers. To succeed in these conflicts, was indeed to triumph over a wily, dangenous, and not ignoble foe; but to full, was in too many instances to become the sacrifice to an enemy that rioted in massacre and banquetted on blood.

Among the brave and hardy warriors who easily and

Among the brave and hardy warriors who easily and fearlessly entered upon the scenes of this border warfare, not one bore himself more proudly, nor contributed more directly to the eventual success of the American arms, than that distinguished son of Kentucky, in whose honour we are this day assembled. High-minded, spirited, chivalrous by nature—burning to avenge his slaughtered countrymen and to uphold his country's rights, wherever and by whomsoever assailed—he surrendered the comforts and pleasures of retirement, sought the privations of the camp, and courted the dangers of the field.

The Battle of the Thames, on the 4th of October, 1813, was a decisive defeat to the allied British and Indian forces, and ensured permanent protection to the inhabit ants of a vast extent of territory. The advantages of that brilliant victory were beyond computation in their was in that sanguinary conflict that the previously in-vincible warrior—he who fought with the confidence inspired by a long series of victories—surrendered his tri-umphs with his life. The records of that battle tells us, that the signal for flight to his followers, both white and red, was the fall of Tecumseh.

It would neither be just to ourselves, nor to the cause of truth, nor is it necessary to a proper appreciation of the distinguished merits of the subject of these remarks, to refuse our acknowledgment of the claims of others to a share in the gratitude of the American people, for home a share in the gratitude of the American people, for hu-norable achievements in the trying scenes of our se-cond war of Independence. Freely and gratefully should those claims be acknowledged and remembered. But in glancing over the long list of brave and successful warriors—so many of whom bear upon their persons the evidences of fierce encounters with the fee—it is scarce-ly possible that our attention should not be attracted to the passe of letters. by possible that our attention should not be attracted to the name of Johnson. In pronouncing a name thus identified with bravery and patriotism, I feel confident that your bosoms will glow with the recollections it is so well calculated to awaken, and that you will cheerfully unite with me in rendering honour to the "Hero of the

But, fellow-citizens, there is another view in which the character of Colonel Johnson must be presented to your notice. If as a brave and successful soldier, he first won the admiration of his countrymen, it is as an unshrinking, fearless and honest advocate of popular rights, that he has established himself permanently in the confidence and affection of the American people.

It cannot be necessary, gentlemen, that I should detain you by a minute examination of the civil career of this distinguished citizen. Throughout a period, almos unexampled for duration in our Congressional history, he

But finding that my fellow citizens of New York are desirons to express publicly their confidence in me, and to give their approbation to the manner in which I have discharged my public duty, I feel a consolation which I shall not pretend to express, and a gratitude which I hope will abide with me as long as I live. as I live.

A public man should accept of no situation where he would not be perfectly willing to make any sacrifice which the happiness of his fellow-citizens, the preservation of the Union, and the independence of his country, may require of him. Whatever excitement may have prevailed in our country, on political or other subjects—whatever irregularities or outrages may have been occasionally committed; and notwithstanding the untimely and misguided attempts to interfere with the sovereignty of the States in relation to matters exclusively, peculiarly and constitutionally belonging to the States, I have never for one moment of my life despaired of the Republic. Whenever false and dangerous principles were pushed to extremity, we have found, and shall always find, an intelligent, a patriotic, and a saving majority combined and united to destroy the evil spirit, of whatever character, which may threaten the peace and harmony

Taking a full view of the past, the present, and the future, I think we have abundant cause for gratitude, and to rejoice at the spirit of unanimity which prevails among our fellow citizens and the prosperous condition of our happy country.

I regret extremely that it will not be in my power to be present at the celebration on the 5th, agreeably to your polite invitation. I have received so many proofs of kindness and confidence from the citizens of New York for years past, that this renewal of their approbation excites in me feelings which it is not in my power to express.

GREAT HARRISON FESTIVAL.

New York, October 7.—On Monday, the 5th of October, the anniversary of the Battle of the Thames was celebrated at a public festival held at Niblo's Garden, in the city of New York, by a large concourse of republican citizens, comprising many Soldiers of the Revolutionary and late war, and many citizens who had filled homorable public stations in civil life. The great saloon at Niblo's was spread out with four long tables, most sumptuously provided with every delicacy of the season. At the rear, was a cross table, overhung tastefully with the drapery of the star-spangled banner, in gorgeous ample folds, together with the ensigns of different nations, &c., and a purple banner in the form of a scroll, with the names of the different States of the Union. The saloon was splendidly lighted up, and a full and effective military band of music was stationed in the gallery. In front of the garden was a large transparency, representing Gen. Harisses leading the charge, against the British and Indians, at the battle of the Thames. At the centre table, which was somewhat elevated above the rest, sat the President Gen. Robert Booknows, an officer of the late war, and on either side of him the gnests, and a delegation from Albany, and other counties of the State. The President was assisted by the following Vice-Presidents, stationed at the different tables:

CINCINNATI, 24th Sept., 1835.

GENTLEMEN: I arrived in this city late last night, from an excursion to the shores of Lake Eric, to witness the commencement of an important work of Internal Improvement, and this morning your letter of the 11th inst. was delivered to me. I assure you, gentlemen, that I duly appreciate the distinguished honor which the citizens of New York confer upon me by the invitation of which you are the organ, to attend their celebration of the auniversary of the battle of the Thames, and I greatly regret that it is not in my power to accept it. If there were no other obstacles, (and there are others.) the shortregset that it is not in my power to accept it. If there were no other obstacles, (and there are others,) the shortness of the time between this and the day of celebration, Bess of the time between this and the day of celebration, would not permit me to make the necessary preparations, and afterwards accomplish the journey in scason. I must rely upon you, therefore, to make for me a suitable apology to the citizens of your patriotic city, for being obliged to decline the intended honor, so far as it regards may personal attendance. Enough of honor, however, remains to me from the circumstance of your having selected this victory to honor, from many others of transcendant glory to our country, in the achievement of which it was not my good fortune to participate. Without referring to the relative merits of this victory, either in relation to its effects upon the public interest, or as an exhibition of mere military arrangement and courage. this distinguished citizen. Throughout a period, almost unexampled for duration in our Congressional history, he has occupied a prominent position in the public connects. Bringing to this department, the same zealous and devoted patriotism which characterized his efforts in another sphere, he has always been conspicuous as an advocate of measures to preserve and extend the great principles of civil liberty. With a mind thoroughly imbued with the spirit which prevailed in the formation of our Government, his whole legislative course has tended to strengthen and perpetuate that bond of Union, which has so mainly contributed to render us a great and happy people.

It is as a faithful and long tried public servant, without regard to party distinctions, that I have spoken of the character and services of Richard M. Johnson May I not add the expression of my satisfaction, that after so large a portion of his life has been honorably spent in the public service, during which period he has never swerved from the support of republican principles, he is now presented by the democracy of the Union for the support of his fellow-citzens to one of the highest offices in the gift of a free people. The result, I feel as sured, will furnish another instance to disprove the axiom that Republics are ungrateful.

I give you, Gentlemen.

6. Colonel Richard M. Johnson: The benefactor of his country as a legislator, and her gallant defender on the field of battle. The weapons of the enemy have inflicted honorable, though painful, marks of patriotism on his person; the grateful Republic will confer more acceptable and enduring marks of distinction upon his character. In compliance with custom, gentlemen, I would offer you a sentiment for your celebration, but as I have none at this moment at my command, which would be appropriate, I must be contented with presenting to you a name. It is, however, a name endeared to every American bosom, and cannot fail to produce reminiscences of sentiments the most important to our Institutions: A name that has designated a character fertile in all the qualifications which adorn the stations in which he was name that has designated a character fertile in all the qualifications which adorn the stations in which he was placed, and which, if defineated by talents adequate to the task, would exhibit a page of moral heauty not surpassed by the far-famed narratives of the Charonean biographer. Like them, it would contribute to plant the seeds of virtue and patriotism in the youthful bosom—Like them, kindle the devotion of the doubting and water the seeds of the character of the contribute of the contri

I request of you, gentlemen, a libation to the memory of Issac Shelby.

To yourselves, gentlemen, permit me to offer my most grateful acknowledgments for the kind feelings which you have been pleased to express for me. I am indeed proud of the approbation of men long distinguished for their devotion to Republican principles,
